August

Edibles in the landscape are a constant source of satisfaction as well as nourishment. Every time I pick a handful of raspberries, pinch some chive, or snip leaves of chard, I feel a connection to my yard literally at the gut level. Growing food for ourselves offers pleasure at some deep level, and the August Newsletter provides inspiration if you are looking to expand your edible repertoire.

Beyond growing food for ourselves, growing food for our communities expands the pleasure. The Community Harvest Project elevates food to the next level, by utilizing volunteers who plant, tend, and harvest fresh produce that feeds thousands of people each year. The Community Harvest Project Barn is the location for ELA's November 5th 2015 Season's End Summit. We'll all enjoy Digging Into the Layered Landscape while looking out upon acres of farmland used to nourish the greater community. MS
