

New at the 2012 ELA Conference & Eco-Marketplace

ELA at the Movies

ELA extends appreciation to Bullfrog Films for their generous support!

Sneak peak at the documentaries scheduled for screening this year:

Tree Anatomy Below Ground, Dr. Alex Shigo

From meristematic points (cells or group of cells that have the ability to divide) to bacteria to soil, learn the details about what is going on, and growing in the ground, in and around trees.

Edens Lost and Found: Philadelphia

Discover practical solutions and models for urban transformations. Philadelphia's rebirth turns on a network of community-based volunteer organizations.

Global Gardener – Permaculture with Bill Mollison

Weaving together microclimate, plants, animals, soil, water, and human needs, Mollison travels the globe sharing his ideas about sustainable agriculture.

Livable Landscapes – By Chance or By Choice

Northern New England communities try to preserve their unique qualities given the history of land use and inevitable changes to forests, farms, village centers, and urban downtowns.

People and Predators Co-Existing in Harmony

Dramatic footage illustrates inspirational stories of ordinary citizens in rural and urban America promoting protection of predators and their ecosystems.

Pointless Pollution – America's Water Crisis

Learn about how the lives of people in four different regions of the US are affected by nonpoint source water pollution carrying oil, grease, trash, fertilizer, and pesticides into the nation's waterways.
